

Below is a use case for a user who would like to purchase a book. We have the end user, who is going to either select a category, or search for books. With both choices, the website should display the relevant information based on the End user's choice. For example, if the user wants to see all non-fiction books, all non-fiction books will display on the webpage. From there, the user will be able to select from one of two options: a digital or a physical copy of the book. If the user wishes to purchase the physical copy, they will need to provide their shipping address along with the usual payment information. After this step, the administrator (our team) will receive the purchase information, as well as the shipper if a physical copy is ordered.

